Birds That Dance.

In his "Pioneering in South Braz I Mr. Brigg-Wither relates that one mo: Try one of our Kabo Corse s ing in the dense forest his attent a was roused by the unwonted sound a bird singing, songsters being rare that district. His men, immediate: they caught the sound, invited him follow them, hinting that he wor'd probably witness a very curious sigl Cautiously making their way throu l the dense undergrowth they fina came in sight of a small stony spot ground at the end of a tiny glade, as c on this spot, some on the stone as some on the shrubs, were assembled a number of little birds, about the size tomtits, with lovely blue plumage as d red topknots.

One was perched quite still on a twi; singing merrily, while the others were keeping time with wings and feet in a kind of dance, and all twittering an  $\epsilon$ : companiment. He watched them for some time, and was satisfied they we e having a ball and concert, and the oughly/enjoying themselves. They then became alarmed, and the performan e abruptly terminated, the birds all goi: g off in differentd irections. The nativ s told him that these little creatures we known as the "dancing birds."
